

Acknowledgements

I wish to thank Drs. Frances Swyripa, Ehud Ben Zvi, and Jennifer Jay, the editorial committee members, for their generous advice and support in recruiting essay submissions. The organizers, presenters and listeners of the 2009 History and Classics Graduate Student Conference at the University of Alberta allowed me to extend the Call for Papers before, during, and after the Conference, resulting in a higher volume of essay submissions. I wish to thank all participants of the Conference for responding positively to the Call for Papers and for maintaining a good relationship between the Conference and the Journal. I am grateful to all the authors for submitting papers because the Journal would not have been possible without them. I also thank them for their patience and understanding during the long editorial process. I am also thankful to all essay reviewers for taking their precious time to read and suggest ways to improve the quality of the essays. I relied more on the cooperation of these experts than on my own knowledge in the production of the Journal. I am also deeply thankful to Brian Gold, the book reviews editor, for coordinating and proofreading book reviews. I thank the Cambridge University Press for sending books for review. Finally, I thank Trevor Rockwell for technical advice, and Melanie Marvin in the History and Classics department, for her selfless help and tips throughout, and for posting the Journal online.
