

About the Authors

Christine Clarke is a third-year history major with a minor in French. She is interested in 19th-Century European History with emphasis on the Industrial Revolution in Britain. She plans to earn her masters and doctorate degrees to become a university history professor.

Tyler Dawson is a third-year student in a combined honours program in history and political science. He is interested in political and cultural differences between the United States and Canada, and the impact of ideology on politics. He plans on pursuing a career in journalism.

Caitlin Guse is a fourth-year Latin American Studies Major and a Political Science Minor. She is interested in Latin American culture and music. She intends to pursue a master's degree in Library and Information Studies.

Noor Iqbal is a second-year applicant to the Combined Honours program in German and History. She is a hand-weaver and is interested in the environmental, religious, and cultural tensions of the early modern period.

Christine-Marie Jutras is in her second year of studying history and political science. She is fascinated by modern history and hopes to one day become a journalist.

Justin Morris is a fourth-year history major with a minor in Film Studies. His interests include the American folk music tradition and American Cinema in the 1970s. He hopes to attend Grad school and someday change the world, for better or for worse.

Katrina Witt is in her fourth year of Honours History, specializing in German memory and interpretations of the Second World War. After graduating, she plans to go into graduate studies in Classics.