

CONTRIBUTORS

Jeff Wigelsworth is a doctoral candidate in the Department of History at the University of Saskatchewan. He is the recipient of a Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada doctoral fellowship. His dissertation explores the use of natural philosophy by English Deists in the late seventeenth and early eighteenth centuries.

Patricia M. Dutchak received her Bachelor of Arts with combined honours in History and Classics in 1999 and her Master of Arts in 2001 at the University of Alberta. She is now in the early stages of a Ph.D in early medieval history, focusing on Carolingian historians and history-writing.

Aya Fujiwara is a third-year Ph.D candidate in the Department of History and Classics at the University of Alberta. A specialist in ethnic and immigration history, her dissertation focuses on the transformation of Canadian identity from Anglo-conformity to multiculturalism between 1919 and 1971.

Jacinthe Duval is presently finishing a Master of Arts degree in History, specializing in Archival Studies at the University of Manitoba. She also works as an archivist at the Centre du Patrimoine for the Société historique de St. Boniface in Manitoba, where she has developed an interest in the history of Francophone communities in the province. She is currently writing a thesis on the history of the formation of the Grey Nuns archives in St. Boniface.

Matthew Eisler is a second-year Ph.D student in the Department of History and Classics at the University of Alberta. His dissertation examines the history of science and technology policy-making in the post-Second World War United States.